愛是唯一真 正的抵抗行動 - Love is the Only ...
竜馬暗殺 Ryôma Ansatsu The Assassinati...

C'est dans ce contexte que la revue est créée en novembre-décembre 1947 par Alioune Diop, professeur de philosophie né au Sénégal, avec le soutien d'intellectuels, écrivains ou anthropologues, dont Aimé Césaire, Léopold Sédar Senghor, Richard Wright, Albert Camus, André Gide, Jean-Paul Sartre, Théodore Monod, Georges Balandier ou Michel Leiris, mais aussi Joséphine Baker, James Baldwin, Picasso, etc.[2,3].

Dans le premier numéro – contenant un avant-propos d'André Gide – Alioune Diop déclare que « la revue ne se place sous l'obédience d'aucune idéologie ou politique. Elle veut s'ouvrir à la collaboration de tous les hommes de bonne volonté (Blancs, Jaunes ou Noirs), susceptibles de [les] aider à définir l'originalité africaine et de hâter son insertion dans le monde moderne ».

La revue rencontre le succès et, dès 1949, la maison d'édition du même nom est créée. Le premier titre publié est l'ouvrage – controversé[4] – du missionnaire belge Placide Tempels (1906-1977), La Philosophie bantoue[2,5]. L'année suivante, en 1950, Alioune Diop accepte d'éditer un manuscrit de Joseph Zobel, refusé
